

Take your first step into midwifery
research

Bachelor of Midwifery (Honours)

Our one-year honours program has a strong focus on clinical practice and allows registered midwives to research contemporary health issues. You'll develop your research capabilities through coursework and a research project focused on a topic you're passionate about.

At the end of the program, you'll have clinical practice knowledge and will be able to undertake research within a midwifery practice. Take advantage of advanced roles that develop within the health precinct on the Sunshine Coast, new maternity services and models, and increasing demand for midwifery researchers.

In this program you will:

- Research contemporary health issues relating to pregnancy or midwifery practice
- Complete a research project
- Choose your topic area to research

Admission requirements

- AQF Level 7 Bachelor of Midwifery award (or equivalent)
- Registered with AHPRA
- Meet the English language requirement
- Have demonstrated a high level of achievement in a degree program
