Help others with their mental wellbeing

Bachelor of Psychology (Honours)

This program helps you understand why people think, feel and behave certain ways. You’ll do practical training to treat abnormal behaviours and psychological disorders, while developing a theoretical understanding of the content.

In the final year of study, you’ll have the opportunity to learn about a specific area of interest when you undertake an advanced research project.

The training is scientifically and ethically based to teach you types of behaviour, examine personality and to do formal personality assessments.

In this program you will:

• Learn from award-winning psychology staff who work in the field
• Undertake an advanced research project
• Participate in paid work as a research assistant
• Gain high-level statistical and research skills

Career opportunities

• Private and government agencies that help people function better mentally
• Organisations that work with people experiencing mental health problems
• Health, community care and sporting organisations

Graduates are eligible to become members of:

• The Psychology Board of Australia

Accredited pathway to becoming a psychologist

Our honours program is an APAC accredited fourth-year course in psychology, giving you a highly recognised qualification and eligibility for registration as a provisional psychologist with the Psychology Board of Australia (PsyBA).

Our Master of Psychology (Clinical) is an approved pathway to registration as a general psychologist with PsyBA. If you wish to undertake this program you will need to attain a minimum result of Class 2 (Division 1) honours.
